TRICK ON TRINITYBunches Hits in Eighth and Scores Six Runs—Final Score
Is 11 to 6.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Durham, N. C., March 24.—Lafayette turned the trick on Trinity today, after the home team had the game apparently sewn up, until the eighth inning. By bunching four hits, assisted by four costly errors, Lafayette scored six runs, the final score being 11 to 6. Fager, playing in left field, who lost his game yesterday, was largely responsible for Lafayette's victory, returning two timely hits and fielding his position well.

Neugent was sent in to oppose Sam Gantt, but after Trinity had landed on him for four hits, one a triple, he was replaced in the fourth by Long, who pitched a superb game, fanning thirteen men and only allowing two bases on balls. Until the final eighth, Gantt had managed to keep Lafayette's hits well separated, when Trinity went up in the air, allowing men to tally.

Trinity scored its first two runs in the third, after Henderson had tripled, and Spruce, Gantt and West singled. In the fourth, Henderson singled, and Fager's double, and three men, Cooper having walked and Gantt having been hit.

Trinity scored again in the seventh. In the fifth, triples by Keeler and Gantt, coupled with a base on balls, and Fager's choice, netted three runs for Lafayette.

In the eighth, singles by Filmore, Cedarquist, Fager and Williams, and four errors by Trinity, scored six runs. Lafayette scored two other runs in the ninth.

ORDEAL CAUSES WOMAN'S DEATH

Husband's Will Provided That She Should Prevent His Burial Alive.

Chester, Pa., March 24.—Forty visits to the vault where lay her husband's body, visits made on successive days as decreed in the husband's will, to assure that he would not be buried alive, so distressed Mrs. Mary Abbott that she died last evening. She had paid her last visit to the temporary tomb. The husband, Henry Abbott, was then buried, and the widow, an invalid, weakened by the torments endured for forty days, collapsed.

She was taken home unquiesh-stricken, soon fell into convulsions and died. Abbott, who was a retired hotel proprietor, died six weeks ago, leaving $150,000 to his widow, with the terrifying proviso that she faithfully observed. Mrs. Abbott stood the ordeal fairly well until two weeks ago. Every day she went to the vault and gazed upon that still life.

Her Nerves Gave Way.

Gradually the strain preyed upon her nerves. Friends noticed yesterday that she was suffering agonies of mind. Yesterday when she left the vault after her last look at her husband's features she almost fainted. By apparent effort she bore the ordeal of the burial rites. Then came the fatal collapse.

Mr. Abbott's wishes are explained as follows: For the last quarter of a century he had been a director of the Chester Rural Cemetery Company and took an active interest in the corporation. About ten years ago he was in the burial grounds when the body of a man was disinterred for removal. The coffin was opened in his presence, and he was horrified on seeing that the body was lying face down.

Arouses His Fears.

"The man was buried alive," gasped the director. The cemetery superintendent explained that the body had evidently been jostled out of the natural position while the coffin was being carried to the hearse or grave, but Mr. Abbott would not be convinced.

"I'll see that this does not happen in my case," were the parting words of Mr. Abbott to the superintendent, and that day he sent for his lawyer and directed that his will contain a codicil preventing his burial for forty days after death. He died on a ferry-boat between Philadelphia and Camden.

Mrs. Abbott was a second wife. She
